

Product Director Core Mexico

About Nubank

Nu is the world's largest digital banking platform outside of Asia, serving over 135 million customers across Brazil, Mexico, and Colombia. The company has been leading an industry transformation by leveraging data and proprietary technology to develop innovative products and services. Guided by its mission to fight complexity and empower people, Nu caters to customers' complete financial journey, promoting financial access and advancement with responsible lending and transparency.

The company is powered by an efficient and scalable business model that combines low cost to serve with growing returns. Nu's impact has been recognized in multiple awards, including Time 100 Companies, Fast Company's Most Innovative Companies, and Forbes World's Best Banks. The Company is preparing for its next growth cycle — accelerating its internationalization process outside Latin America and entering new verticals beyond financial services in its core markets.

About the Team

Mexico Core owns the product vision and strategy for Nubank's core value proposition in Mexico. As the business grows toward its next phase — including the transition into a licensed bank — the team is responsible for the mass-market strategy, the core value proposition, and the products that reach the broadest base of Mexican customers.

This role sits within the Core pod led by Diego Sierra, working alongside the Credit Card and Account teams to ensure a consistent, differentiated value proposition across Nubank's product suite in Mexico. It is one of two open roles on the team — the other being a Design role — and will be the first Product Manager reporting directly into this leadership structure, making it a foundational hire for how the pod scales going forward.

About the Role

We're looking for a Product Manager to own Mexico's core value proposition and mass-market bundles strategy — a role that sits at the intersection of product strategy, pricing, and cross-functional alignment.

This person will shape the value proposition for the mass market segment, including the build-out of the payroll account proposition as Nubank transitions into a licensed bank in Mexico, the country's yield strategy, and the analytics and pricing decisions that underpin the mass-market segment. Because the role touches products owned by other teams (Credit Card and Account), it requires someone who can drive alignment across squads, and across global and local stakeholders, without direct authority over all the pieces involved.

Key Responsibilities and Expectations

- Define and drive the core value proposition and mass-market bundles strategy for Mexico.
- Own the payroll account proposition, an increasingly important product line as Nubank transitions into a licensed bank in Mexico.
- Lead Mexico's yield strategy.
- Own mass-market analytics and pricing strategy, defining how products should be priced for this segment.

- Ensure global product alignment — translating global strategy into local execution and representing local needs in global product conversations.
- Coordinate closely with the Credit Card and Account (GBA) product teams to keep the value proposition consistent across products.
- Build and maintain strong working relationships across global and local senior stakeholders, given the cross-functional nature of the role.
- Bring rigor and best practices to the product craft, in line with Nubank's product culture.

Qualifications

Professional Experience & Education

- Bachelor's degree in Business, Engineering, Design, or a related field.
- Solid product management experience owning B2C products, ideally at scale.
- Experience in financial services is a plus, though not mandatory.
- Background at tech-driven, product-centric companies (e.g., fintechs, marketplaces, or other digital-first businesses) is strongly preferred over traditional or consulting-style product backgrounds.
- Experience navigating complex, matrixed organizations with multiple stakeholders across global and local teams.

Competencies & Attributes

- Based in, or willing to relocate to, Mexico.
- Fluent Spanish is required, given the role's direct focus on the Mexican mass market; English proficiency is needed to work with global teams.
- Direct, clear, and concise communicator — comfortable giving and receiving candid feedback.
- Strong cross-functional collaborator, able to build trust and drive alignment without direct authority.
- Adaptable to Nubank's product culture and ways of working — comfortable in a fast-paced, ownership-driven, craft-focused environment.
- Analytical mindset, comfortable making data-informed decisions on pricing and mass-market strategy.

Core Leadership Skills

The following executive leadership skills serve as a reference for senior leadership levels at Nubank, setting expectations that grow with increasing complexity, ambiguity, and influence.

BUSINESS ACUMEN

Drives strategic business alignment at Nubank by analyzing market dynamics, identifying opportunities, and ensuring informed decision-making to influence organizational direction.

COMMUNICATION

Masters complex communication, mentoring others, fostering open dialogue, and adapting strategies to enhance organizational effectiveness.

AGILE ADAPTABILITY

Leads with agility, pioneering solutions, fostering a culture of learning, collaboration, and continuous value delivery.

Nubank's Values

- We want our customers to love us fanatically
- We are hungry and challenge the status quo
- We think and act like owners, not renters
- We build strong and diverse teams
- We pursue high standards and smart efficiency

Role Details

Location: Mexico City, Mexico

Reports To: This position reports to Diego Sierra.

CONTACT

Ana Caldas | Executive Recruiter | ana.caldas@nubank.com.br

Luciana Tavares | Executive Candidate Experience | luciana.tavares@nubank.com.br